TRADITIONS IN TRANSITION

»»»»»»»» 25 APRIL – 9 MAY ««««««««

Any popular movement, grounded in everyday lives, draws its strength from songs and stories that carry both memory and the call to action.

There are other, less organic and more astroturf, movements which aspire to the traditions of trades councils and their relationship to their locale and its population. You see them emerging with a flurry of press releases and shiny spokespeople proselytising on Instagram and TikTok, advocating this supplement or that tax cut, but all they convey is marketing and noise.

This programme of events and thinking and songs and debate is about recognition of our past and our future as trade unionists. The content and the context are inextricably linked.

We are, in the words of a former Belfast resident, Seamus Heaney, "not simply a credit rating or an economy but a history and a culture, a human population rather than a statistical phenomenon."

The traditions are all on show in this enervating programme. Banner making and T-shirt printing. Music played on strings, skins, tin and turntables. Joyful noises abound.

Like tributaries, these events stem from the great river of humanity which is the largest May Day Parade on this island. Over 40 trade unions and thousands of members and activists marching in a loop around their, our, city. The events listed harmonise the steps of the marchers and the swirl of the pipers leading it.

Educate – Exhibitions, walking tours and talks from academic activists.

Agitate – Carnival arts workshop and performances from the upcoming generation of trade unionists. Celebrations of our music and poetry.

Organise – The point of trade unionism, empowering working people by lobbying for Good Jobs legislation, defending the rights of the marginalised and welcoming every person who can add to our confection of humanity.

Most of all, have fun.

Solidarity forever!

»»»»»»»»»» MAY DAY BELFAST 2026: TRADITIONS IN TRANSITION ««««««««««

Tradition can often be mistaken for something fixed, something to be preserved unchanged. Yet the traditions that matter, in the arts, in community life, and in the labour movement, have never stood still. They have always been shaped and renewed by people responding to the pressures, the ambitions and the possibilities of their time.

This year's programme reflects that renewal in very real ways and the partnerships behind the Festival. Young people from communities throughout the city have not simply learned about the history of collective action, they have interpreted it, reimagined it, and made it visible through their own creative work. On May Day itself, that work moves from the workshop to the street, the performance space and theatre, from idea to public expression, reminding us that culture is not passive, it is made and remade through participation.

For the arts locally, this moment is critical. In a time of uncertainty, where structures of support can feel increasingly fragile, the role of creative practice becomes harder to maintain but all the more necessary. The arts provide a space where people can understand change, question it, and shape it. They offer a language through which communities can articulate both their concerns and their ambitions. They offer all of us a voice to help express our disappointment, joy and outrage with our world.

For the labour movement, Traditions in Transition speaks to continuity of shared community purpose. The core values of solidarity, fairness and collective voices remain as urgent as ever. What changes is how those values are expressed, who is included within them, and how new generations come to claim them as their own.

What is particularly powerful about our May Day Festival programme is the way these strands come together. The march and rally, the workshops, the exhibitions, the music and performances, all form part of a single conversation. They connect heritage with lived experience, and reflection with action.

In the times we are living through, that connection matters. It reminds us that the future is not something that happens to us. It is something we make, together, drawing on what has come before, and reshaping it for what comes next.

ANNUAL MAY DAY LECTURE: THE THREAT OF GLOBAL IMPERIALISM AND BUILDING A PEOPLE'S RESPONSE

DATE: Thursday 30th April

TIME: 6.00pm

VENUE: Irish Congress of Trade Unions Building, Donegall Street, Belfast

"War is a game played by maniacs who kill each other. Locate the man who profits by war and strip him of his profits - war will end." – Woody Guthrie

The inevitable economic and social crises resulting from years of neoliberalism have created an unstable world. Rather than seeking peaceful settlements, conflicts are being fuelled and are escalating towards a global war.

While the Far Right creates threats from the internal 'other' to achieve power in the interests of big capital, many centrist governments are only too happy to create external 'enemies' in response to the failure to solve the crisis in their economies inflicted by the demands of global capital. Indeed, Ireland's historic position of neutrality is under threat.

As imperialist aggressions escalate across the world, war crimes, genocide, ethnic cleansing and occupation, is becoming normalised.

International solidarity and unity of the peoples of the world in building a global movement for peace which flatly rejects imperialist barbarism is our only hope to save people and planet.

Clare Daly, a well known international politician and activist will deliver this year's May Day lecture on perhaps the most pressing issue of our times. Clare will be joined by local Trade Union Educator, Brian McAnoy and BDTUC Vice President, Kerry Fleck.

WALKING TOUR OF RADICAL BELFAST WITH LABOUR HISTORIAN JOHN GRAY

DATE: Monday 4th May

TIME: 5.00pm

VENUE: Meeting point, James Larkin Statue, John Hewitt beer garden.

Led by local radical and labour historian John Gray, this tour of radical Belfast will follow in the footsteps of the United Irishmen when Belfast was the most revolutionary centre in the British Isles. It will chart the emergence of the trade unions during the era of Belfast's breakneck industrial expansion and visit the battlegrounds of the 1907 Dock Strike and recall James Connolly's last Belfast speech. Many of the sites involved have vanished or changed but the spirit of Belfast radicalism lives on in the modern era as we confront the struggles of our times.

UNTIL LABOUR KNOWS NO MASTER – PAMPHLET LAUNCH

DATE: Thursday 7th May

TIME: 7.00pm

VENUE: Irish Congress of Trade Unions Building, Donegall Street, Belfast

To commemorate the passing of a former President of the Belfast Trades Union, Pearse McKenna, the Council have commissioned a publication “Until Labour Knows No Master”. The pamphlet includes contributions from activists and academics both local and international with articles a range of subject areas including international solidarity, imperialism, the Troubles and the ongoing challenge of increasing violence against women and girls.

Pearse who passed away in 2025 was a stalwart trade unionist was dedicated to the cause of anti sectarianism. His work in this area led to a failed assassination attempt by the Ulster Freedom Fighters in 1991 after he had made a stand to promote a workplace free from sectarian symbols and flags, as an ATGWU shop steward in Ormeau Bakery.

Everyone welcome on the night to hear both tributes of Pearse and also a discussion on how his work must continue into the future

RED FLAGS AND RISING VOICES: BOOK LAUNCH

DATE: Thursday 7th May

TIME: 7.00pm

VENUE: Enniskillen Town Hall

A book launch by Fermanagh Trades Union Council and the second in a series looking at the working class history of Fermanagh. The period covered includes the great depression of the 1930's, the outdoor relief struggles, the fight against fascism, the red scare period following the second world war, the swinging 60's, the birth of the Northern Ireland Civil Rights movement and the subsequent descent into violence and oppression.

What remains constant throughout this study is the preparedness of workers in every sector and every area of our county to stand up for what is right whether through industrial struggle, political struggle or both. We hope our readers will identify their trade union ancestors in these pages and tell us more about them for use in future publications

WALKING TOUR: STARS AND STRIKES

DATE: Friday 8th May

TIME: 7.00pm

VENUE: Meeting point, BT Riverside Tower

We invite you to participate in Stars and Stripes (Seeking the Starry Plough), a night walk in Belfast city centre linking local Trade Unionism with star gazing, with the specific aim to seek out the Starry Plough from a number of locations which were the sites of recent strikes, pickets and rallies.

The walk, organised by artist Aisling O'Beirn & Trade Union organiser Kerry Fleck, is intended as an optimistic celebration, reminding us of the active role people continue to take in industrial struggles despite an increasingly hostile political landscape. It also draws attention to light pollution and ways to address it.

We welcome people involved in and interested in the Trade Union movement as this walk is only made possible by the active contributions of participants. We will stop briefly at a number of sites to attempt to see the Starry Plough, asking participants to recall memories of industrial action associated with that particular site.

The walk commences at the BT Tower at 7.00pm with short stops en route for discussion and contributions from participants. It finishes at the American Bar and lasting 1 hr 30 min - 2 hrs Aisling O'Beirn is a Belfast based artist exploring the night sky as physical structure and a political entity through sculpture, installation, animation, site-specific projects and alternative walks. Her interdisciplinary work explores the relationship between art, place, politics and science.
